

SOMEDAY you can live on a few acres in the country where you'll throw loud parties in your barn and watch your DVDs at ear piercing surround-sound levels. But for now, you'll need to live together in perfect harmony with neighbors just few feet away.

SOUND OFF

- First of all, remember the Golden Rule, the one about treating your neighbors as you'd want to be treated. That probably doesn't mean cranking up the TV for the final minutes of "Saturday Night Live" to drown out your roommates playing a rowdy game of quarters.
- If you're planning a party, let your immediate neighbors know. Give them your phone number and ask them to call if they become bothered by the noise.
- Invest in some cordless stereo headphones. The eardrums you save could belong to a future employer.

Give a hoot. Don't noise pollute.

SAN LUIS OBISPO POLICE DEPARTMENT

www.slopd.org

